

No fun in the Land of Fun

Introduction

Rulo has learned that this week he'll have his last chance to see a special 3D movie with super heroes at the cinema. All of his friends went to see it and they told him that he needs to go and watch it in 3D on a big screen, otherwise he'll lose a lot of the special effects. The only chance he has left is on Friday evening.

Intrigue

Rulo's parents promised him that they will take him to see the movie, but they will need to pass first by the Land's public office to pay their taxes. The office is open only on Friday in the afternoon.

Action

The last day has arrived. Rulo is excited he'll get to see his favourite super heroes at the movies. He gets in the car with his family and start the drive. When they had just a few blocks to go, the car passes over a road hole, and one of the front wheels gets a flat tire. Rulo's parents manage to change the tire, but as soon as they start again, they pass over another hole. This time the tires remain intact, but it takes a while to get the car started again.

They finally reach the office, but here they are greeted by a immense line of people waiting to pay the same tax. After a couple of hours lost in line, they finally pay and leave for the cinema, only that now the movie is almost over.

Conclusion

Rulo misses his chance to see the movie on a big screen.

Explanatory conclusion

It seems that those in charge with running the Land of Fun have done a poor job. The roads are broken and full of holes, and the tax-paying system is burdensome, as the office is open only on Friday in the afternoon and everyone needs to wait in long lines.

Questions

The inhabitants of the Land of Fun have the right to a fair and efficient administration. If the roads would have been in good conditions and the lines at the public office short, do you believe that Rulo would have reached the cinema in time to see the movie? What other things do you believe could be improved in the Land of Fun?